Sharing Our History Through Storytelling

Hey !

Vanessa here.

I want to personally invite you to 44th and 3rd Booksellers in Atlanta for an evening of discussing women, history, and fiction. Sign up here.

For personalized, signed copies, give 44th and 3rd a call: \(678\) 692-6519. They ship.

I'm book-touring this month. I'm highlighting Murder in Westminster. It's my hardcover mystery centered on Lady Worthing, a woman of privilege and of mixed descent (Scottish and Jamaican) with an absentee husband and wonderful crazy family and friends. Pity people keep dying around her.

The talk about Lady Worthing:

Library Journal -“Fans of Regency-era historical mysteries featuring intelligent heroines (such as Andrea Penrose’s Lady Arianna or Tasha Alexander’s Lady Emily) will find this series a welcome addition to the genre.”

Publishers Weekly—“Riley offers a vibrant picture of the roles Black and mixed-race people played in Regency life. Fans of Bridgerton will enjoy this one.”

Back to the book tour:

For the tour, I will visit Houston, Pasadena, and more. My events page on my website has all the details.

Follow my Instagram to get more real-time event happenings and more.

Come out if you can. Tell a friend, or order a signed copy from one of these beautiful indie bookstores.

Come Out Saturday, 6:30 at 44th and 3rd Booksellers

Murder in Westminster

The first book in a diversely cast Regency-set mystery series and featuring an amateur female sleuth who must solve her neighbor's murder after being listed as one of the prime suspects, to Kensington.

Smart, witty, and refreshingly diverse, this new Regency-set series from acclaimed author Vanessa Riley combines her signature emotional richness and attention to detail in a historical mystery featuring a strong, clever, and captivating heroine. Publisher's Weekly says: "Riley offers a vibrant picture of the roles Black and mixed-race people played in Regency life. Fans of Bridgerton will enjoy this one."
